Dentsu Inc. (Tokyo: 4324; ISIN: JP3551520004; President & CEO: Tadashi Ishii; Head Office: Tokyo; Capital: 74,609.81 million yen) released today its annual report of advertising expenditures in Japan for the 2014 calendar year, including an estimated breakdown by medium and industry.

According to this report, Japan's advertising expenditures in 2014 totaled 6,152.2 billion yen, an increase of 2.9% over the previous year. Despite the effects of an increase in the consumption tax, overall spending on advertising posted year-on-year gains for a third straight year.

Overview of Advertising Expenditures during 2014

1. Advertising expenditures in 2014 were boosted by last-minute demand before the consumption tax increase in April and by spending related to the Sochi 2014 Olympic Games. Expenditures fell in response to the tax increase, but still maintained modest growth, thanks in part to the 2014 FIFA World Cup Brazil™. Expenditures for the year totaled 6,152.2 billion yen, marking the first time in six years that Japan's advertising market had surpassed the 6,000 billion yen level.
2. Broken down by medium, expenditures fell slightly in Newspapers (down 1.8%) and were unchanged in Magazines, but rose in Radio (up 2.3%) and Television* (up 2.8%; including both Terrestrial Television and Satellite Media-Related spending). As a result, overall spending in the traditional media posted a gain of 1.6%. The Internet advertising market (up 12.1%) reached the 1,000 billion yen level for the first time ever, driven by growth in smartphone and video ads, and ads using new advertising technologies. Moreover,

Promotional Media (up 0.8%) also contributed to overall growth, expanding for the third year in a row.

* Starting in 2014, the Television category has been revised to include spending on both Terrestrial Television and Satellite Media-Related advertising.

3. By industry category (for the traditional media, but excluding Satellite Media-Related spending), year-on-year spending rose in 14 of the 21 industry categories, and fell in 7 categories.

Major categories posting gains included Information/Communications (up 7.2% on increased placements related to satellite broadcasts, mobile phone rates and services, and smartphone-related services); Home Electric Appliances/AV Equipment (up 7.1% on growth in ads for electric vacuum cleaners, refrigerators and LCD televisions); Cosmetics/Toiletries (up 5.6% on placements related to shampoos and conditioners, and direct-marketed cosmetic lines for women); Automobiles/Related Products (up 3.4% on a rise in ads for wagons and imported SUVs); and Beverages/Cigarettes (up 2.0% on growth in advertising for domestic beer and happo-shu (low-malt beers)).

Expenditures fell in 7 of the 21 industry categories, including Hobbies/Sporting Goods (down 7.9% on weak demand for game and audio software ads); Education/Medical Services/Religion (down 4.4% on cutbacks in ads for vocational and other educational institutions, and correspondence education); Foodstuffs (down 3.2% on lowered spending in the areas of health foods, instant noodles and snack foods); Apparel/Fashion, Accessories/Personal Items (down 3.0% on reduced placements for women's clothing, and men's and women's shoes).

• Outline of Advertising Expenditures by Medium

Advertising expenditures in the traditional media (including Satellite Media-Related spending) in the 2014 calendar year totaled 2,939.3 billion yen, up 1.6% from the previous year. Spending in Television (including both Terrestrial Television and Satellite Media-Related advertising) grew 2.8%.

Spending on Internet advertising reached 1,051.9 billion yen (up 12.1%) and held firm throughout the year. Promotional Media also posted gains for a third straight year, up 0.8% to 2,161 billion yen.

• Quarterly Breakdown of Growth in Advertising Expenditures in the Traditional Media in 2014

A quarterly breakdown of advertising expenditures in the traditional media (including Satellite Media-Related spending) showed that growth rates were rather weak from April onward, but spending nevertheless remained positive throughout the year.
